On Making the Cultural Turn in Literary Studies: Emergence, Evolution, and Scope of Cultural Studies in Literary Spaces

The last two decades have witnessed a paradigm shift within English classrooms as syllabi and academic focus have switched gears from traditional literary studies to Cultural Studies, a shift which has been called 'the cultural turn in literary studies'. The session will set to motion a broad discussion on the field of cultural studies, its socio-political spaces of emergence, philosophical moorings, and scope in present day academics. It shall endeavor to introduce various possibilities for cultural discourse analysis, exploiting the paradigm shift of focus to popular culture, or to quote Madhava Prasad, the "imperatives of the contemporary" such as cinema, internet, art or memes. How did the field emerge? What does it study? What are its tools of analysis? How does popular culture and its productions such as cinema or trolls, get studied within the field? What are the possibilities that this field provides for a researcher or a student of literature? These are some questions that this session wishes to take up and answer.
